PORT FOLIO.

From the Boston Weekly Messenger.

John E. Hall, esq. has recently became the editor of the Port Folio, under his auspices we are satisfied, that this work will be conducted in a very different spirit from that which has characterized it for some years past; and are not without sanguine hopes, that it will vie very nearly at least, to the rank which it originally held while it was enriched with the genious of Dennie. The new prospects of this publication, are thus noticed by the editor of the N. Y. Evening Post.

"We have long had the pleasure of knowing Mr. Hall the editor, and fear not to predict, that under his management, the Port Folio will re-appear in its pristine beauty. He was the friend and correspondent of Dennie, and it will be seen that he is worthy of the intimacy that subsisted between them."

R. Patterson, having declined the agency,—subscriptions for the above work, will be received at the office of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

The use of history.—It is curious to observe what kind of attention we in general pay to the events of past ages. We read of the rise of kingdoms, and the fall of empires, with a degree of carelessness, and treat them as fables of antiquity, in which we are but litttle concerned. We turn over a few pages, are pleased with the relation of battles and feats of valor, close the book, and suffer the impression to die away, not reflecting that they are beacons to warn posterity, and teach a powerful though silent lesson, which future periods should learn and apply. On the other hand, by attending to their misfortunes, we may avoid our own, and by separating what was beautiful and noble in their constitutions, from what was defective, we may be able to raise a superstructure that may be durable and permanent. In this view of history, one of the most powerful instructions it conveys is, the consequences that inevitably follow certain actions. These, as they might not at first have appeared fatal, were disregarded. Experience fully disclosed them, and opened a scene of horror human prudence might not have foreseen. Time has at length fully attested, that the chain and connection between these causes and effects is inevitable and certain. May this truth be impressed on the people, and the most happy, the most salutary consequences will ensue.

A friend who has just arrived from the Kingdom of Hayti, has furnished us with the Royal Gazette of that state, a variety of printed documents, proclamations, &c. from the royal press at Cape Henry (Francois,) and verbal intelligence of the state of the country.—King Henry, (Christophe) was at peace with Petion and the world, regulating the civil policy of his extensive territories, and encouraging the progress of cultivation and the arts and sciences.—His residence is at the palace of Sans Souci, in a town built by him under a mountain 30 miles from the Cape, highly cultivated and defended by works covering 360 pieces of cannon. The population of his subjects increases rapidly, and it is supposed he has 150,000 men able to bear arms. (Petion is said to have 200,000.) The crown of king Henry had lately been received from London, where it cost 28,000 dollars, exclusive of the diamonds which his sable majesty furnished himself. His coach had also arrived, and is a superb carriage built at an expense of 18,000 dollars in England. Schools and academies are patronised by him, and he is about commencing the erection of a college, for which he has sent to Europe for 20 professors or instructors—a contract for three cargoes of lumber from this country for the completion of the collegiate buildings, we have seen commerce and the culture of the soil was improving in his dominions; strangers on mercantile business are treated honorably, and the kingdom rising in power and respectability. The first and second of January, the eighteenth anniversary of the liberty and independence of Hayti, was celebrated with the greatest solemnity and magnificence, at the city of Sans Souci, by a procession, review, mass, levee, addresses, feast, illuminations, &c. A roll of the knights of the royal and military order of St. Henry, is given in one of the papers; and a list of fifty foreign vessels which sailed from Cape Henry from the first of July, to the ninth of Nov. last. A catalogue of the princes, dukes and barons, dignitaries of the empire, is found in some of the publications. Notwithstanding the cessation of arms, a paper war seems to be directed from Christophe's press, against Petion—and the pamphlets, journals, &c. are written and printed in a respectable style.

Guning, informed us, that Napoleon Bonaparte was in very good health, but at varaince with Bertrand, and the rest of his suit, with whom he had no friendly intercourse, but preferred the company of the British officers."

Puerto Orotavo, (Teneriffe) Dec. 12.

"We had a dreadful fire here, a few days ago, which consumed a large convent for women; and I am sorry to relate, seven unhappy victims felt the fury of the unrelenting flames. The scene for some hours was dreadful. It was first discovered about 10 o'clock at night: all the nuns were in bed, and it was for some time before they could be made acquainted with their danger. The few that escaped, were obliged to leave the convent naked, as they never sleep in their clothes. These that were burnt, were seen at windows, till the flames consumed them. There was no means of saving them, as the windows were strongly grated with iron, and only one door that they could get out of, which was entirely enveloped in flames. The fire was occasioned by a nun's making sweet meats; she had placed her fire on a table in a small earthen stove, and left it unextinguished; the heat of the stove made the rosin in the wood to fry out: It is supposed a cinder had fallen, and the convent being built of the same kind of wood as the table, it was soon in a blaze. The next night we had a tremendous fall of rain; the water courses were filled and run a different way; in consequence of which, fourteen persons were drowned in their houses."

From the Calcutta Times, Sept. 12.

The Nautilus sailed from Batavia Roads on the 29th of June, bearing dispatches for the supreme government.—Previous to her departure, intelligence of the ratification of peace by the president of the U. States, had been received at Batavia.

On the 30th of June, the American ship of war Peacock, capt. Warrington, carrying 22 guns, and manned with 230 choice seamen, was cruizing off Anjier in the straits of Sunda. In the afternoon of that day, the Master Attendant at Anjier, went on board the American ship, and informed her commander that peace had been ratified between Great-Britain and the U. States. This information he affected not to believe, and detained the Master Attendant as a prisoner of war. Half an hour after this occurrence, the H. C. cruizer Nautilus, fell in with the Peacock. Capt. Warrington hoisted English colours, and lieut. Boyce, the commander of the Nautilus, sent a boat, with his master and a military officer, a passenger on board the Peacock. The American confined them as prisoners of war, and disregarding the information they gave him of peace, ranged along side the Nautilus, and hoisted the colours of the U. States.

Lieut. Boyce hailed and demanded to know whether he was coming as a friend or enemy. The answer returned was an enemy! lieut. Boyce then told him that peace had been ratified between Great-Britain and the U. States, and that he had the documents on board.—Capt. Warrington then said "if peace has taken place, haul down your colours instantly!" Lieut. Boyce refusing to comply with this insolent demand, the American fired into the Nautilus, which she returned with a broadside. Lieut. Boyce was wounded in the hip by the first fire, and shortly after his knee was shattered by a 32 lb. shot. Mr. Mayson, the first lieut. also severely wounded; and no officer remaining to fight the ship, he was compelled to surrender, after a gallant defence in close action, which lasted 15 minutes.

Our readers have already seen the list of the killed and wounded on board the Nautilus. The American loss was, four men killed and six wounded.

On the following morning Mr. Warrington permitted the Master Attendant to return to Anjier, for the purpose of bringing American papers.—On the production of those, he expressed himself satisfied that peace had taken place, restored the Nautilus, and wrote officially to the Master Attendant, that he should desist from farther hostilities.

We regret to add, that lieut. Boyce has suffered the amputation of his leg.

The Nautilus being much shattered in her hull, has been sent to Samarang for repairs. The wounded men left at Anjier, were in a state of recovery.

ST. LOUIS, FEB. 3.

News from the Missouri and Upper Mississippi, was received in town yesterday, from confidential agents, residing with the Indian tribes, that British emissaries were travelling through all the Indian villages in that Territory and Illinois, inviting the Indians generally to a great council to be held shortly at St. Josephs, near Mackinaw. It is confidently asserted by several respectable characters, that the number of British spies, not only travelling among the Indians, but residing now in our villages, are very numerous.

THE SCHEDIASM—No. 3.

TO OUR SENIOR SISTER IASM.

Dear Lady,

It is with the most unfeigned pleasure, we have read your introductory letter in the Gazette, wherein you have announced an intention of writing occasionally for the public, in conjunction with our worthy friend Mr. S. I am directed by the respectable society of young ladies, over which I have the honour to preside, in testimony of their high estimation of your merit, to invite you to become an honorary and corresponding member. Our association wishing to avail themselves of your obliging disposition, have in a particular manner instructed me to solicit your opinion in answer to the two following questions:—Firstly, whether we could profitably extend the objects of the institution, so as to embrace debating and composition? Secondly, whether it would in your judgment be advisable to increase our numbers by the admission of a few gentlemen? In complying with my instructions, it only remains for me, in my official stile and character, to subscribe myself with profound respect, your obedient humble servant.

——— ———, Directress, &c.

Mrs. I.

The foregoing letter bears such evident marks of unauthentic origin, that I shall decline taking any notice of the invitation it extends to me; but the questions on which my opinion is solicited, seem to be of sufficient intrinsic importance, independent of the weight of official sanction, to entitle them to consideration

In replying to the first question, I labour under a degree of embarrassment; not from any difficulty with which it is perplexed, but from the triteness of the reasons I shall have to assign for its most obvious solution. Whatever importance we may attach to reading well, whatever utility there may be in reading much, it must be confessed, that the crude and chaotic learning, with which the mind becomes filled from the perusal of many books, is of very little advantage to the boarder, unless well analized, digested and arranged; but every person, who is at all conversant with the operation of his own mind, must be sensible, how difficult it is to engage it in that intense application, which is necessary to a strict analysis and judicious arrangement of the ideas it has received. There are few minds capable of any deep or fixed attention, except when an outward expression of the thoughts is attempted, in the form of a public debate, or written composition, and even this outward expression is usually neglected, unless there is some previous engagement or honorable pledge to make it. Nothing short of such an undertaking therefore, united to a strong impression of fear or apprehension for the manner in which our performance will be received, is a sufficient incentive to engage our thoughts, and fix them intensely for any length of time. Independent of this consideration, the facility that is acquired in speaking and composing, is an accomplishment that can scarcely be overrated—Those, who have tasted in a high degree, the pleasure of corresponding with absent friends, are alone capable of appreciating this happy talent. It is not because we are unconscious of the advantages of this kind of improvement that we neglect it, but from an innate and unconquerable indolence to which the mind of every person is more or less addicted.

As to admiting gentlemen into the young ladies' association, I do not hesitate to say it would be unadvisable. On the subject of the comparative abilities, and excellencies of the two sexes, I trust a more enlightened age is, introducing just and liberal views, and I have every reason to believe, that females, dispised as they heretofore have been, are gradually ascending in the scale of importance, to their proper and natural elevation. We already see them begin to think, speak, and write for themselves; we see them successfully engaging in literary pursuits and labors; we see them giving birth to productions, scarcely excelled in merit and brilliancy; by the works of the most distinguished authors of the present or any past age.—While I offer this merited meed of praise to those bright ornaments of our sex, who have seemed to shine in spite of the disadvantages of inferior opportunities and narrow education, what shall I say of the growing negligence of the other sex, and the consequent decline of their boasted pre-eminence? What shall we say, when we see soft, superficial and imbecile woman, assuming a masculine vigor of mind; while man—stern, bold, sensible, aspiring and discriminating mind, is sinking into that same levity and effeminancy, which he has affected to despise. It is a fact which cannot be desputed, that to trifle genteely, and prate incessantly, has become the fashionable ambition of our beaux—who are rather annoyed and offended, than pleased—when any serious topic of conversation is introduced. They shrink from every sober discussion; and dismayed at the idea of speculating upon matters, which have never employed their thoughts, they are quickly put to the blush, if not to flight, at the slightest suggestion of a rational subject of conversation. The young ladies need not therefore, indulge the least anxiety, lest these gay gallants should regard this institution with jealousy, or oppose it as an encroachment upon their prerogatives. I do not believe it will excite even as much as emulation. If the present taste continues to prevail, we may expect at no distant period, to hear proverbially of superficial and garrulous men—while we see females the depositaries of knowledge, and wielders of power; deeply exploring the regions of philosophy; leading armies forth to battle; proudly administering the affairs of state, and thus casting their boasted superiors into the shade of disparagement.—I have only to add, that if any further advice or instruction should be asked—there is no person, who will more cheerfully communicate—than,

I.

THE CURATE.

The following beautiful portrait is selected from the "Wild Irish Boy."

His name was Corbett. He had been a Curate six and forty years. He sought not to be any thing else. The religion he professed had taught him, a [illegible] food and raiment, to be therewith [illegible] tent;" and the same influence [illegible] ing to his habits, had enabled him [illegible] temperance and prudence, to obtain [illegible] he thought necessary in life. He was married, and had a son whom he himself had educated; and who, like himself, was in the ministry. When I speak of the effects of his mode of prayer and preaching, I speak of the effects I witnessed in the course of a constant attendance on him. He never read prayers; he prayed, and with such a deep and fervent feeling, with emphasis so obviously suggested, not by the art, but by the nature of the supplication: with pauses so strongly marked by solemnity of recollection, and a suspension of the act, without a suspension of the feeling that his congregation almost unconsciously joined in the responses, which were originally intended for their utterance, and felt the force of habit and of indolence yield to the holy energy with which he poured out his petitions.

I never heard man preach as he did.—He was a scholar to whom few I have ever met were superior. He was a man delighting in conversation, in which, if light, he could amuse, and if argumentative, he could instruct, more than any man I ever listened to. But in the pulpit, he laid aside the wisdom of words and the weapons of fleshly warfare altogether. That he was a scholar you felt not, that he was a man of rich imagination, or of strong reasoning powers you felt not that he or his discourse could be referred to any class of mind or composition, that could assist you to judge of them in a temporal sense. But you felt irresistably that he was a believer, pleading with the power of conviction; that he was a religionist speaking from experience, commending a life we lived and a felicity he felt, that he spoke and acted on principles which, though beyond the rangee of existence, were not beyond the range of reality;—principles which he made present and vivid and substantial, alike by the force of eloquence, and the force of example.—He was a speaker, who of all others I ever heard, succeeded most in averting your attention from himself to his subject. It was long after his sermons had concluded before you could think of the preacher; like the priests in the Jewish hierarchy, he disappeared in the cloud of incense himself sent up.

The christianity he preached, was such as a man would preach, who abstracted from the influence of prejudice and habit, and self wisdom, had sought his system in revelation alone, and found and formed it there. It was neither a frame of doctrinal niceties, curiosity constructed and totally unfit for use—nor a formulary of habitual observances, at which the constant attendance of the body may excuse the absence of the mind. It was a system, of which the principles were operative, in which opinion held its relation to practice.—Christianity was described as a dispensation, exhibiting certain facts to the belief—and the belief, if subdued by these facts, suggesting the most important and active consequences to our minds and our lives. It may be thought there was something in this mode of representation, too argumentative and consequential for the comprehension of a rustick audience—it was not so.—Though his positions were strong and important, they were clothed in a language, whose peculiar and providential felicity is, that it is the universal language, the first language that religion talks to the ear of infancy, the language that genious reverences, and ignorance understands, the language of the poet and of the saint, the language of divinity and of the heart, the language of the scriptures.

He spoke as a father pleading with a wayward child; he spoke as a judge with a criminal, to confess and be forgiven; as a guide with a wanderer, to return and to rest.

When he finished his sermon, it was not with Cowper's "well-bred whisper." He appeared for some time engaged in prayer; an effusion of mind so solemn and deep, that most of the audience involuntarily joined in it; those who did not, were awed and silent. When he came down and walked among us, the thunder of his eloquence was hushed, his countenance spoke still. He had descended from the mount, but his visage retained the brightness of that high place.

(From the Gleaner.)

COGITATIONS OF MY UNCLE JOHN.

I am a young man, Mr. Caperton, and have mingled very little in the political contest that so unfortunately distracts our country: and I am not unfrequently amused by the disputes that arise between zealous politicians. A few months ago, business called me to Ohio, and as I was journeying westward, it was my fortune to overtake a good looking man of about thirty-five, on his way to Pittsburgh. Liking his appearance we concluded to travel together. Our conversation on the road, was, the expense of travelling and other unimportant subjects; when on stopping at an inn for some refreshment, we found a genteel looking stranger, who, we learned was going our road and agreed to bear us company. The time passed for some hours very agreeably. Both my companions proved intelligent, & from their unsolicited bounty and kind expressions

poor wooden legged soldier, who sat
e road side, left no doubt in my
but they were very kind hearted benevolent :—
That's a brave fellow, I'll warrant said Mr. Freewell.
Aye; said Mr. Hartley, our late us war, evinced the many a brave
e."
So you think Mr. Madison's war, a us one, then I see, Sir," added
ewell.
From your question, I perceive Sir,
d Hartley, you belong to the party
would prefer seeing their country
ed upon, than exerting spirit
gh to resit her oppressors."
Your perceptions, Sir, rejoined Free-
, I suspect are not remarkably clear.
ery in belonging to a party, that d not involve their country unne-rily in war—without preparation—opitiate a tyrant who had insulted —sacrificing the best interests of country to keep themselves in pow-and finally who would make a peace loning every object for which the
was ostensibly declared.
Sir, said Hartley, a party that would,
their country was engaged in war,
se to advance funds for its support—
would vote against the necessary ies—and endeavor to embarrass the rnment by inflammatory—factious lutions, has a claim in my opinion
e character but that of patriotism.
, sir, what is your opinion of the ford Convention?"
I will answer you, Sir, if you will in first place tell me what you think of Bladensburg races?"
inding the disputants getting very
n I interposed, and after some time, uaded them to maintain their sentints without permitting their passions get the better of their judgments. As ne on, each one maintained with earnestness that he could tell a mocrat or a Federalist by his conduct manners, without his saying a word politics. A bottle of wine having been on the occasion, we jogged on till t, very harmoniously.
The public house at which we lodged large, commodious and neat, situate a limestone valley, surrounded by utiful meadows and having the ap-rance of wealth and comfort. The dlord was extremely attentive—so-ous but not obtrusive. In the evening daughter, a fine girl of 18, played us mber of tunes on the Piano Forte and landlady treated us with a mince some apples and excellent cider.— were all delighted with the order, eatness, and kindness of our host hostess, and when, before retiring ed, the good publican called his fay around him, and in an unaffected ner offered up his petition to the one of Grace. Freewell whispered my ear "A Federalist I'll warrant
—I'll win of Hartley this time."
Morning came—our bill was reasona-and we were about taking leave feelings of more than common af-tion for so short an acquaintance—n Freewell asked, "May I take the erty to enquire, col. Maclean, whein politics you are a Federalist or mocrat?"
"You might as well as ask," replied
whether I was for my country or inst it."
"But pray be good enough to say,
whether you are a supporter of Mr.
son and Mr. Snyder."
"I desire to thank heaven," said he mnly, "that we have had raised up ese trying times, men of so much dom and patriotism."
Hartley shook him cordially by the , while Freewell, with a look of ppointment, bid him good morning, rode on.
The next night found us far advanced our journey. Our accommodations re neat, but not elegant. There was appearance of cheerfulness, but not alth in the family. The landlord sprightly, intelligent and agreeable.
had not been seated an hour before traveller came in and mentioned that strange woman seemed very ill lying side the road about a mile back. "It a pity she should suffer," said the dlord, and immediately ordering his t waggon, and placing a bed and low in it, went to bring her to his se." "Are you not afraid of that ceful disorder?" enquired the tra-er of the landlady. "We hope to our duty," said she mildly, "and re the consequence to heaven." She s truly ill; she belonged in the bor-
s of Maryland, and had been to vi-her daughter. Being poor, she tra-ed on foot—was now out of money,
and expected to die by the road
e. Mr. Oakley with the kindest acts bid her welcome, promised to take
e of her, and sent for the physician, rtley, I saw was pleased, and in the rse of the evening remarked that we d got to another Democratic House.
the morning it was his turn to ask question.
"Well, Mr. Oakley, said he, will have the goodness to gratify our riosity so much as to tell us whether are a Democrat or Federalist."
"I'll tell you, sir, said he, I love my untry too well to like to see her trea-res squandered in useless wars—her s butchered by piece-meals in hopes expeditions to Canada—or her far-rs and mechanics burdened with an normous load of taxes. If, added he, mes Ross, and I know him well, or fus King, whom I know by character,
any other true son of Washington,
had been at the helm, we should not now have to mourn for 30,000 of our brothers who have died in the war, nor have had to groan under 150 millions addition to our debt.

Hartley put spurs to his horse—I followed, and in about half an hour, Freewell overtook us, his countenance expressing the triumph he felt over his opponent.

The conclusion drawn by Hartley and Freewell was, in my opinion, not far from the true one:—That there were wise, and sincere, and good men in both parties; seeing things in different aspects; but having equally at heart, the best interests of the country: and that it was only necessary for the good of both parties to be better acquainted with each other's character and views, to do away a great portion of the party spirit that distracts the land.

Western Bank of Virginia.

THE subscriber has just observed a publication in the 'Ohio Federalist,' unfounded and injurious to the Western Bank of Virginia; and only begs the public to suspend their opinion, until he can have a meeting of the directors—which he is morally certain will result in a resolution to place funds in Pittsburgh, to redeem the paper in this part of the country; which they are amply able to do, and which will be done with the least possible delay. Notwithstanding the reports in circulation, those who will be so polite as to tender the paper of this institution, at the bank at Parkersburgh, I pledge myself it shall there be redeemed.

Pittsburgh, March 5, 1816.

DIED—Unexpectedly, on Sunday night the 25th ult. Miss ANN HOLMES, daughter of Mr. John Holmes, of Baltimore. Death is indeed indiscriminate in its awful strokes—it is not alone the aged and weary pilgrim, expecting with anxiety but resignation its approach, but the gay and vigorous traveller, looking forward to a long and prosperous course, alike obey its imperious mandate. E'en innocence and beauty, while, perhaps, contemplating in the morning of their day, a distant and tranquil evening, yield to its grasp. But oh! consoling truth, infinite wisdom commands the bow of death, and infinite goodness speeds its shafts.

The estimable and lamented person, whose departure is mourned, was in the bloom of life. Truth and impartiality accord with the impassioned accents of friendship, and say, that she was of disposition mild and ingenuous, of mind pure and lovely as ever animated woman: of manners gentle, unassuming, and winning: as a daughter, she was dutiful and affectionate—as a sister, warm and tender—as a friend, constant and sincere.

Though the living form of virtue has ceased to attract and engage those of her sex who beheld, yet fond remembrance will cherish it—and the sympathising tear which falls for her early departure, will embalm the memory of a sweet example of female worth.

Yet shall her grave with rising flowers be dress'd,
And the green turf lie lightly on her breast:
While angels with their silver wings o'ershade
The ground, now sacred by her relics made.

Messrs. Bosler & Co.

Have just received from LEE'S PATENT and FAMILY MEDICINE STORE, New-York,

A FRESH SUPPLY OF THE FOLLOWING

GENUINE MEDICINES.

Dr HAMILTON'S

Grand Restorative.

Prepared (only) by H. LEE, No. 56, Maiden Lane, New-York.

The proprietor of HAMILTON'S RESTORATIVE DROPS confidently recommends it as an invaluable medicine, for the speedy relief and permanent cure of

Nervous Disorders	Violent Cramps in the stomach and back
Consumptions	Indigestion
Lowness of Spirits	Melancholy
Loss of Appetite	Gout in the stomach
Impurity of Blood	Pains in the Limbs
Hysterical Affections	Relaxations, &c
Inward Weaknesses

This Medicine is perfectly different in its qualities and operation from those hot and irritating drugs so frequently proposed for similar purposes, which only recommend themselves by the dangerous rapidity of their effects—and which, acting as a temporary, but violent stimulus on the nervous system, infallibly produces greater evils than those which they are intended to remove.

The principal operation of this medicine is in the stomach, restoring the digestive power, and sending from that organ new health and vigor into every part of the system; it enriches and purifies the blood without stimulating, too violently, the nervous system; strengthens the secretory vessels and general habits, brings back the muscular fibres to their natural and healthy tone, and restores that action which immoderate evacuations have destroyed, and whose loss had thrown the whole frame into langnor and debility.

The restorative is absolutely above all commendation in removing those weaknesses and infirmities with which many females are afflicted, the consequences of difficult and painful labours, or of injudicious treatment thereon.

In cases of extremity, where the long prevalence and obstinacy of disease have brought on a general impoverishment of the system, excessive debility of the whole frame, and a wasting of the flesh, which no nourishment or cordial could repair.

The Grand Restorative is prepared in Pills, as well as in fluid form, which assists considerably in producing a gradual and lasting effect

HAMILTON'S

Worm Destroying Lozenges.

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes, of every age, and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from worms, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

It prevents Chilblains or Chopped Hands, and the ill effects of getting wet or damp in the feet.

THE GENUINE PERSIAN LOTION,

So celebrated among the fashionable thro'out Europe, in preventing and removing blemishes of the face and skin, freckles, pimples, inflammatory redness, scurfs, tetters, ringworms, sunburns, prickly heat, &c

THE RESTORATIVE POWDER,

For the Teeth and Gums.

This excellent preparation comforts and strengthens the gums, preserves the enamel from decay, and cleanses and whitens the teeth, by absorbing all the acrimonious slime and foulness, which, suffered to accumulate, never fails to injure and finally ruin them.

HAMILTON'S ELIXIR.

Celebrated for the cure of colds, obstinate coughs, asthmas, and approaching consumptions, and a certain remedy for the whooping cough.

HAHN'S GENUINE EYE WATER.

A sovereign remedy for all diseases of the eyes, whether the effect of natural weakness or accident.

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE Subscribers have the pleasure to inform the public, that the drawing of the GRAND STATE LOTTERY will positively commence on Monday the 22d day of April next, and will be continued regularly to its close—that the scheme of the present class is considered much superior to either of the former ones, inasmuch as there is little more than one blank to a prize —a circumstance unprecedented; and in consequence of which the whole Lottery, or nearly so, would have been now sold—but for the uncertainty of drawing—owing to the indisposition of the Manager—this cause of delay happily no longer exists—and the day is fixed—from which no deviation has ever been made in the State Lottery. Tickets, therefore, must have rapid sale, and the price increased in proportion to their scarcity. At present whole Tickets may be had at eleven dollars—shares in proportion.

On the 1st day of March, Tickets will be $11 50, and on the first Monday in April, at $12.—Of this the public are respectfully apprised, that clubs and individuals may supply themselves at the lowest rate, which they can now do at any of the following offices:

DOCTOR CUSHOLM'S
Anti-Bilious Pills,

Of a quality superior to any thing of the kind ever offered as a GENERAL MEDICINE, in this Country.

NOW prepared from a recipe of the celebrated Dr. Cusholm, who, from his long residence in the West-India Islands, has been enabled to favor the world with the most complete history, and most approved methods of curing all the BILIOUS DISEASES of those warm climates.

This extraordinary Medicine, which now for the first time is finding its way into general practice, has properties in the highest degree superior to the mercurial nostrums frequently recommended by the name of Anti Bilious Pills. The extraordinary powers of this medicine as a solvent and evacuent of Bile is without example; never producing debility or injuring the health, in the smallest degree of the most delicate child or weakly female.

The BILIOUS HEAD-ACHE, so much complained of in this country, and in the neighbourhood of rivers, is often removed by a single dose, which, to a strong man, is only five pills, and to a weakly woman, three. The same dose will generally remove the most excruciating pains of the cholic, like a charm by abusing the bile to pass downwards in the course of an hour or two.

Two or three Pills taken an hour before dinner, and repeated every third day, will effectually remove those diseases arising from flatulency and indigestion, and by persevering in the use of them for a considerable time, the appetite will be improved, and strength and vigor will return.

Two Pills taken at bed time, with a cup of penny-royal tea, and repeated every second night, will effectually remove Rheumatic pains wherever seated.

A single Pill, taken every fourth hour with a cup of flaxseed tea, will cure Pleurisy, promote expectoration, and relieve coughs and colds.

In CONSUMPTIVE CASES and DISEASES OF THE LIVER, no medicine ever yet discovered, has been known to perform such cures. Two Pills taken every third morning, will be found sufficient, unless costiveness prevails; in which case the dose may be increased according to the strength or constituton.

The Dysentery, Croup, and Summer Complaint on children, are soon relieved by a few doses. A single Pill to a child of 6 years old, and the dose increased according to their strength and age.

In Asthmatic or Phthisical cases, where the laborious breathing and great oppression, with faintings, are fast sinking the patient to the brink of the grave, a few Pills, taking one every hour, with fennel or pepper-mint tea, will often enable the patient to walk about in a few hours.

The above valuable Medicine is Sold
